

SPOTLIGHTING OUR PEOPLE

ENVIRONMENTAL SERVICES TEAM

As Earth Day is celebrated on April 22, we are highlighting our Environmental Services group, which helps protect and minimize impact to natural and human environments. Our Environmental Services group is a team of ecologists, geologists, and scientists who are essential in making sure that infrastructure improvement projects avoid, minimize, and/or mitigate impacts where work is planned.

Whether it's delineating wetlands and streams, analyzing noise or ground water impacts, or identifying cultural resources or community impacts, American Structurepoint's environmental team works with our designers and engineers to achieve environmental compliance with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), State Environmental Policy Act (SEPA), Section 401/404 of the Clean Water Act, and many other federal and state laws and regulations. One of our most recent and significant projects is the final segment of Interstate 69. This transformative project included making certain all environmental commitments and natural resource impact minimization was properly implemented.

Our environmental team goes the extra mile to educate communities about infrastructure improvements, allowing communities to understand the needs and benefits of these important projects. Our team provides both virtual and in-person opportunities to review materials and presentations.

Our innovative professionals work collaboratively with regulatory agencies, American Structurepoint engineers, and local leaders to lessen environmental impact and allow projects to proceed as we continue to improve communities across the country.

With a fun work environment, a wide range of work and responsibilities, and a company committed to your professional development, our environmental services team is a great place to learn and grow your career.

With a diverse portfolio of projects, a collaborative work environment, and a firm committed to living out our values of community service and mentoring others, American Structurepoint is the place to start and grow your career.
